NEIWPCC Welcomes New Massachusetts Commissioners

Lowell, Mass., May 16, 2012 – The New England Interstate Water Pollution Control Commission is pleased to announce that Paul Hogan, John P. Sullivan Jr., and F. Adam Yanulis are now NEIWPCC Commissioners. Massachusetts Governor Deval Patrick made the appointments in early May. As NEIWPCC Commissioners, they will provide support and guidance on NEIWPCC programs and projects and will represent Massachusetts's views at NEIWPCC Commission meetings. We are thrilled to be joined by three such highly qualified individuals.

Paul Hogan has more than 35 years of experience as a regulator and water resources expert in Massachusetts. In his present capacity as Senior Water Resources, Regulatory and Compliance Specialist at Woodard & Curran, he helps clients throughout New England address regulatory issues. Previous positions include serving for many years as supervisor of the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection's Surface Water Discharge NPDES Permit Program. He holds an MPA in Public Administration and an MS in Environmental Engineering, both from Northeastern University.

John P. Sullivan Jr. has worked for the Boston Water and Sewer Commission since 1978, and has served as BWSC's Chief Engineer for the past 23 years. In this capacity, his responsibilities include implementing BWSC's Capital Improvement Program and managing the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority's Combined Sewer Overflow Program. He is a registered Professional Engineer in Massachusetts and a certified (Grade 4) Operator of Drinking Water Supply Facilities. He holds an MBA from Northeastern University and an MS in Emergency Management from the Massachusetts Maritime Academy.

F. Adam Yanulis has 26 years of experience working with public and private water utilities and state and federal agencies. Since 1997, he has served as a Vice-President at CDM Smith, where he is responsible for sales and marketing municipal services in New England. He develops long-term infrastructure planning and program management for public clients and helps clients develop consensus among elected officials. Before joining CDM Smith, he spent eight years at Woodard & Curran. He is a past president of the New England Water Works Association, and holds a BA from the University of New Hampshire.

The NEIWPCC Compact of 1947 calls for each of our member states—the six New England states and New York State—to be represented by five NEIWPCC Commissioners. The three new Commissioners round out the Massachusetts delegation, which also includes Kenneth Kimmell, Commissioner, Department of Environmental Protection (represented by Bethany Card, Assistant Commissioner, Bureau of Resource Protection) and John Auerbach, Commissioner, Department of Public Health (represented by Beverly Anderson, Bureau of Environmental Health).

The three new appointments mark an official end to the service of three NEIWPCC Commissioners whose terms had expired. Charles Button, James Rogers, and Lester Sutton represented Massachusetts on the Commission for many years and provided much leadership and support. We salute and thank them for their many contributions.
